

Royal Ancestors

This chapter is based on a chart by the late Archibald F. Bennet called "The Kinship of Families" and a chart "The Royal Line" by the late Albert F. Schmuhl. All families claiming genealogy from Adam and Eve to the present time are based on the information on these two charts.

The biblical blessing of Israel to his son, Judah, states:

"The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come." Genesis 49:10

This would indicate that there will always be rulers and legislatures that descend from Judah. This prophesy seems to be fulfilled.

It should be noted that the ancient god Odin or Woden of Norse mythology should not be confused with this historical personage of the same name. Sigge, son of Fridulph, a pontiff prince of Azoff in the Crimea, took the name of Odin when he assumed early leadership of the Saxens and led them to northwestern Europe from Tyrkland to escape the Roman General Pomey.

From this Odin or Woden (Sigge) descends two royal lines. The first one descends through Alfred the Great. The second one descends through William the Conqueror.
